

SHOW & TELL

by Jon Weiss

Attached are a few pictures (sorry they're not great). Description: a plastic stone building that was used by a former manufacturing company. It was sold to a clothing manufacturer. The color palette was determined via a Google search. There are about 8 layers of color on this building (primers, white stain, coloring of all the stone, various dry brushing, and pastels). The roof was weathered to show rust via blending several rust colors and using a sponge to apply to the roof. This allowed for an even, varied rust look. The pallets shown hold bolts of actual fabric.

